In an evil hour my grandfather adopted this advice, and came to England. It was the time when the emigration of the French nobility had filled London with objects of sympathy, and society with aympath zers with their mislortunes. Among the means resorted to for assisting the many interesting victims of the Revolution were representations, gives chart annus, and a street and the control of the co Revolution were representations, given under the direction of Le Texter, of Berquin's and Madame De Geulis's juunder a huge glass bell, made to cover some large group of precious Dresden china, where her tiny figure and flashing face produced even a more beautiful elect than the costly work of art whose crystal covering was made her momentary cage. I have often heard my mother refer to this season of her childhood's favoritism with the fine folk of that day, one of her most vivid implessions of one of her most vivid implessions of which was the extraordinary beauty of person and royal charm of manner and deportment of the Prince of Wales, and deportment of the Prince of Wales, and —his enormous appetite: enormous perhaps, after all, only by comparison with her own, which he compassionately used to pity, saying frequently, when she declined the delicacies that he pressed upon her, "Why, you poor child! Heaven has not blessed you with an appetite."

Deadly Poison in a Chicken Pie.

Deadly Poison in a Chicken Pic.

A dispatch from Pierson, July 5, to the Grand Rapids Times, says.

A case of severe and wholesale polsoning occurred here on Sunday. A company composed of three or four families of relatives, in all about fitteen persons, assembled at the holise of A. C. Fields, of this place, on Sunday, to visit and dine together. Each, it seemed, brought in something to make up a liberal family dinner. Among the diseasers at family dinner. Among the diseasers at family dinner. Among the diseasers at two hours after the feast nine of the members, and the only ones who ate of the pic, were taken violently sick, the sickness being accompanied with violent retchings and vomiting. Dr. H. S. Holden was immediately sent for. Under his treatment all began to recover in about two or three hours, and are now convalescent. The doctor amnounced it a case of pelsoning. On examination it was found that the crop of one of the chickens dressed and cooked for the occasion contained undigested potatoe-bugs. Whether the bugs thomselves ored the poison, or the Paris green which the bugs may have esten eagendered the sickness, is not certain.

Now the days are with us when the honest farmer glances at the dainaged stimp of what had been an iddex linger, and mournfully remarks: "Mowing achine," and then changes the subject by asking if Beecher is to have another
